Tonneau to Cover Sissy Bar (Grab-Handle) at Rich Maund's Cycle Upholstery (www.russianiron.com)

- Some Owners Want a Tonneau that Cover the Grab-Handle on the Sidecar
 - Some wanted this because they don't use a windshield, like Gear-Up owners.
 - Others using a "Brooklands" style shield that bolts to the sidecar body forwards of the cockpit.
 - All needed something that would keep water out of the sidecar better than the stock tonneau.
 - Military sidecars in battle needed the grab-handle exposed to grab and push the rig through mud.
- Rich Tailored It as Snugly as Possible Up Front, Much More than the Stock Tonneau.
 - Rain could always get under the front top edge of the tonneau. No way to tailor around that.
 - The body needs a "break water" at the front of the cockpit to deflect water. But since that isn't there, my best suggestion is to wrap a bungee cord tight over the top of any tonneau in front of the eyelets to hold it down snug against the body.
 - When I built my own sidecar body for my Retro I purposely built a break water from tubing at the front to deflect rain to the sides and downwards. It works!
- To Aid in Keeping rain Out, Rick's Tonneaus Cover over the Sidecar's Sides further than Stock Covers.
 - All over-hang the rear trunk lid to help keep rain from flowing in there.
 - Side straps like the newer rigs use are available.
 - If you have an older rig and want to use side straps but have no steel buttons for them on your rig? For $7 extra I'll send you a set of four double-nutted SS (Stainless Steel) machine screws. You can drill the holes, where the button heads are used to attach the side straps
- All Tonneaus Come with Adjustable Strap to Stow Rolled-Up, out of Passenger's Way
- Want to Use a Regular Ural Windshield with This Style Tonneau?
 - Can add on the "H" slit leather patches to allow the windshield rods to pass through.
- Construction
 - These are a full double layer construction tonneaus.
 - Black leather fittings and patch gommets up front.
 - Spiked marine grommets at the rear.
- Price
 - Same price as my regular tonneaus. $275 plus $12 shipping in the USA.
 - Olive-Drab Cordura or Black
 - Heavy marine-grade vinyls, Multi-camo and OD Cordura, or woodland camo cotton duck
 - Indicate if you want the leather side straps or straps and the SS hardware added.
 - Indicate if you need windshield rod pass thru patches added.

Holes in Tonneau Cover to Allow Windshield Up with Cover in Place

Ural Sidecar High-Backed Seat (Deluxe) Tonneau Cover (ebay.com)

High-Back Seat Tonneau at Rich's (Rich Maund) Cycle Upholstery (www.russianiron.com)

List Price: $300

The high-back seat tonneau is a whole 'nother animal to build. It fits around the handle like stock, but uses much heavier materials than stock and forms a stiffer and better fitting hood over the seat back. It uses a H-slit leather patches for a tighter-fitting leather patch with a round hole to allow the windshield rods to pass thru, and a strap to keep it rolled up out of the passengers way.

Amount of Tonneau Cover Hold-Downs

(www.curdforum.net)

• Sidecar Tonneau Cover

- Unless you have a Dnepr, you'll be annoyed by the lack of hold-downs on the Ural's sidecar cover.
- In a strong breeze it's not uncommon to have the rear portion flapping about as you ride, because the two grommets just aren't enough to hold it in place back there.
- Zip down to your local hardware store and get a box of 2" wide self-adhesive Velcro strips.
- Cut 4 pieces 2" square and place the fuzzy ones on the underside of the cover, one on each corner at the rear and one on each side about midway. Sew them in place for added strength.
- Stick the "hook" pieces on the sidecar body directly under the fuzzy patches and you're done!
